Tarbert Castle Presentation by Robert McPhail

On Monday afternoon you will be running over the old village of Tarbert, which was originally sited up around the Castle. The castle's royal connections date back to the 11th century AD. But in 1325, the castle was completely rebuilt and extended by King Robert I (Robert the Bruce).

Robert MacPhail has been involved in the rescue and preservation of Tarbert Castle, as well as introducing a novel grass cutting regime (sheep, whose wool is spun locally) and developing the Community Orchard and art works.

This presentation will show the history of Robert the Bruce's Castle including works uncovered by the recent archaeological dig which have subsequently been covered again 'for their protection'.
